Subject: 33% water conservation

To whom it may concern:

I understand that the State is considering a 33% water water conservation mandate effective February. Personally, my household has more than met the current state water mandate and we were happy to comply and amazed to realize how much water can be saved by just paying attention. However, given the precipitation that has been received so far this water year and the fact that we could receive considerably more isn't it foolishly early to decide on the percentage we should be asked to conserve? You 33% seems arbitrary to me. Revisit this issue in April when you will have a better indication of what will be needed. Come on, use some common sense!
