

commentletters

From: myamberdog . <myamberdog@gmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, November 19, 2015 11:30 AM
To: commentletters
Subject: Comments on the current State Urban Water Restrictions

On talking with neighbors and friends we've all kind of concluded that a better way to look at water "rationing" if you will, will be to come up with an equitable water use quantity that would be allowable/acceptable based on the lot size one has. To look for 36% off of recorded water use from 2 years ago (in our desert community) penalizes those who have been saving water all along versus those that had bad watering habits or an active leak at the 2013 time and aren't necessarily suffering (or really conserving) with the required reduction percentage you have going on now.

By adopting some kind of formula based on property size, Desert Water Agency, as our water dispensing agency could warn and fine homeowners using a very simple and fair formula plus that would create a total goal in mind for them as well as us, the homeowners...To us it feels like a fair and simple solution to use.....

Please consider this....

Thank you.

Gary Hunter
174 E. San Lucas Road
Palm Springs, CA 92264