With respect,

No "enforcement policy" should be " focused on education and outreach." The focus of enforcement should always be fair, consistent and progressive enforcement that is state-wide. The focus state-wide should be on those watersheds where progressive dewatering is destroying Public Trust Resources. However, it is proper to have an outreach and education component, not just for those with water rights, but for citizens concerned about the loss of the Public Trust flows that sustain fisheries and recreation. Y'all should definitely include and fund Public Service Announcements educating everyone about water rights, how the Public Trust limits them and the State's obligation to protect fisheries, swimming holes and other Public Trust Resources.

Good Morning,

We are hoping to receive comments on the development of a Proposed Water Rights Policy, your feedback is important to us. Education and Outreach was mentioned in yesterdays presentation in regards to the development of a water rights regulatory strategy. The Policy Development Team could develop a regulatory strategy that is focused on education and outreach and we would like to see what the stakeholders and diverters thoughts are on the strategy.

Respectfully,

Policy Development Team

You mentioned "education and outreach". What have you done in the past to educate the Public and water rights holders about the Public Trust and the dual water rights system?
