

Dear Sirs:

When I bought my first house in 1976 in California, I put in drought resistant plants and lots of gravel.

When I bought my second house, I covered 80% of the landscape with gravel and drought resistant plants. I brush my teeth with a cup of water. I have gone through, "If it is yellow, let it mellow. If is brown flush it down." I have been a good steward of water. The Monterey Peninsula does not deserve this draconian cut back in our water supply. My husband is 74 years old and has a colostomy that he must irrigate daily along with showers. Not one drop of water has been created. PLEASE BE FAIR WITH US.

Thank you,
