RE: Comment Letter – Industrial General Permit

Dear Chair Marcus and Board Members:

On behalf of California Coastkeeper Alliance, Heal The Bay, California Sportfishing Protection Alliance, Center for Biological Diversity, and Pacific Coast Federation of Fishermen’s Associations (“Environmental and Fishing Groups”) we appreciate the opportunity to provide comments on the State Water Resources Control Board’s (“Board”) 2013 draft permit for stormwater discharges associated with industrial activities (“Draft Permit”). CCKA and our network of California Waterkeepers have been actively involved in ensuring the control of stormwater pollution for twenty years. Many of our groups have reviewed, inspected, negotiated best management practices (“BMPs”) and monitored industrial facilities discharging stormwater since the original permit, and have worked closely with the Board to develop, adopt and implement stormwater permits that improve our state’s water quality.

Over the past two years, we have worked with and provided many iterations of input to the Board to ensure that the industrial permit complies with state and federal law and serves as a “bridge” to future stronger permits. Unfortunately, despite a significant investment of resources and staff time, several core aspects of the Permit reflect a step backward from the current permit, and even the 2011 version of the draft permit. Although the Board’s Response to Comments on the 2012 Draft Industrial General Permit (“Response to Comments”) states repeatedly that the previous permit has been “substantially revised” to address our comments, absent a few areas of improvement, the Draft Permit largely fails to address our detailed October 22, 2012 comment letter.

While earlier permit work examined the utility of numerics to improve the clarity and efficiency of permit implementation, recent work has focused on “increasing opportunities for dischargers to lower costs” and reducing “unnecessary compliance costs.” While we appreciate that compliance costs are a major issue of concern for both dischargers and the Board, we urge Board members and staff to first and foremost focus on water quality protection, especially in light of the solid evidence demonstrating that poorly controlled industrial stormwater discharges are a major source of waterbody impairments. The public is concerned about industrial pollution impacts to California’s waterways and submitted more than 6,000 letters in support of a stronger permit during this last phase of public comment (see Attachment 1).

Ultimately, the Draft Permit should ensure the collection of more and better data, achieve water quality objectives, and improve the use of pollution control technology, in a clear and objective way for all parties to determine compliance with the permit. Yet, many of the concerns we have raised throughout the permit’s development continue to be problematic, and the Draft Permit contains new provisions that are at odds with Clean Water Act requirements and case law. We urge the Board to address the below issues, and reconsider our detailed October 22, 2012 letter and attachments, which we incorporate by reference.

- Illegal requirement to implement BMPs that reflect “best industry practices” without BAT and BCT references;
- volume-based design storm standard is unclear and insufficient to maintain compliance;
- failure to provide required protections to ensure that discharges do not cause or contribute to exceedances of water quality standards for receiving waters;
- delayed TMDL implementation;
- monitoring requirements are insufficient to determine compliance; and
- omission of a framework and timeframe to evaluate data and develop numeric limits.

I. The Board Cannot Solely Require That Dischargers Implement BMPs That Reflect “Best Industry Practices” Without Referencing Clean Water Act-Mandated BAT and BCT.

Since the original issuance of the General Industrial Permit, it has included a clear requirement that dischargers must comply with the Best Available Technology Economically Achievable (“BAT”) and the Best Conventional Pollution Control Technology (“BCT”). For example, the existing industrial stormwater permit requires that “[f]acility operators covered by this General Permit must reduce or prevent pollutants associated with industrial activity in storm water discharges and authorized non-storm water discharges through implementation of BAT for toxic and nonconventional pollutants and BCT for conventional pollutants.”¹ The last 2012 version of the Draft Permit simplified the language but maintained the same requirement: “Dischargers shall implement BMPs that constitute BAT/BCT to prevent and reduce pollutant discharges.”²

The new Draft Permit suddenly veers from this long-standing language to entirely new language that fails to reference the Clean Water Act-mandated BAT and BCT requirements and relies solely on the broader notion of BMPs. The new draft, Section V.A proposes instead the following language: “Dischargers shall implement BMPs to reduce or prevent discharges of pollutants in their storm water discharge in a manner that reflects best industry practice considering technological availability and economic achievability.” This new BMP standard is reiterated in proposed Section X.H.1, addressing the Stormwater Pollution Prevention Plan (SWPPP) requirements. Section X.H.1 states, “[t]he Discharger shall, to the extent feasible, implement and maintain all of the following minimum BMPs to reduce or prevent pollutants in industrial storm water discharges.” Then, in the accompanying footnote 11, the proposed section states that “[f]or the purposes of this General Permit, the requirement to implement BMPs ‘to the extent feasible’ requires Dischargers to select, design, install and implement BMPs that reduce or prevent discharges of pollutants in their storm water discharge in a manner that reflects best industry practice considering technological availability and economic achievability.”

Proposed Section V.A and footnote 11 are inconsistent with the Clean Water Act’s definitions of BAT and BCT. By failing to make reference to BAT and BCT, this requirement would appear to replace the statutory criteria mandated to implement and achieve BAT and BCT with a truncated and subjective evaluation by individual dischargers of what pollution reduction is feasible. The focus on BMPs rather than BAT and BCT appears designed to suggest to dischargers that they can comply with the permit without actually implementing the best technologies. Already the Board has heard that the discharger community interprets this new language to mean the Board has defined BAT and BCT for industrial stormwater discharges to be a discretionary BMP analysis conducted by dischargers without regard to the Clean Water Act’s requirements. This, of course, cannot be the case. Staff is very clear that they have not conducted nor do they plan to conduct as part of this permit renewal process any BAT or BCT analysis. Thus, even assuming the new standards are based on best professional judgment, which requires staff evaluation of the BAT and BCT criteria set forth in the Clean Water Act and implementing regulations, staff and the Board have not done any analysis that supports altering in any way Congress' BAT and BCT criteria, or how those criteria might be applied to industrial stormwater discharges on a facility-by-facility basis. As a result, the new permit's effluent limitations must clearly require each discharger to implement BAT and BCT. Any alteration in those criteria would be inconsistent with the Clean Water Act and invites dischargers to randomly select BMPs based on their subjective notion of "best industry practice" and some loose consideration of "technological availability" and "economic achievability."

Board staff does not have the authority to unhinge the Draft Permit's BMP requirement from the Clean Water Act's BAT and BCT standards. By March 31, 1989, the Clean Water Act required all point source dischargers, including those discharging polluted stormwater, to achieve effluent limitations based upon BAT for toxic and nonconventional pollutants and BCT for "conventional" pollutants.³ Conventional pollutants are TSS, oil and grease ("O&G"), pH, biochemical oxygen demand ("BOD"), and fecal coliform.⁴ All other pollutants are either toxic or nonconventional.⁵ These are the minimum levels of pollution control required by the Act.⁶ In 1987, when Congress amended the Act to address EPA's failure to properly regulate stormwater discharges in the previous fifteen years, Congress did not alter any of these deadlines for any "discharge associated with industrial activity."⁷ To the extent industrial dischargers in California have not implemented BAT or BCT, they are now 22 years overdue.⁸

The Act sets forth the specific criteria that the Board or, in the case of the proposed stormwater permit, individual dischargers, must take into account when determining BAT and BCT.⁹ As for BAT:

"[f]actors relating to the assessment of best available technology shall take into account the age of equipment and facilities involved, the process employed, the engineering aspects of the application of various types of control techniques, process changes, the cost of achieving such effluent reduction, non-water quality environmental impact (including energy requirements), and such other factors as the Administrator deems appropriate."¹⁰

Unlike the lesser standard of best practicable control technology established for the early years of implementation of the Clean Water Act, a BAT-based effluent limitation does not take into account any cost-benefit analysis.¹¹ Hence, the Fact Sheet is incorrect where it suggests that, in identifying BAT, "[t]he costs of implementing these BMPs are weighed against their effectiveness and ability to protect water quality."¹² Indeed, Congress fully expected that, for any given category of dischargers, application of BAT would result in the closure of some facilities. "Congress clearly contemplated that cleaning up the nation's waters might necessitate the closing of some marginal plants."¹³

Nor is the average performer within a category of dischargers representative of BAT. “[R]ather than establishing the range of levels in reference to the average of the best performers in an industrial category, the range should, at a minimum, be established with reference to the best performer in any industrial category.”¹⁴ Thus, even for a nation-wide BAT effluent limitation established by EPA, data from as little as three facilities employing an, at the time, state of the art, “experimental” technology, was sufficient for EPA to make an achievability finding for the entire industrial category (in that instance pulp mills).¹⁵

Anticipated application of technologies resulting from public and private research is a proper basis for establishing a BAT limitation.¹⁶ “[T]he reasonableness of what is ‘economically achievable’ should reflect an evaluation of what needs to be done to move toward the elimination of the discharge of pollutants and what is achievable through the application of available technology - without regard to cost.”¹⁷

Likewise, the Clean Water Act establishes very specific criteria for determining BCT – which the Board has no authority to change – even by subtly replacing BAT and BCT with new terminology focused only on BMPs. BCT is only relevant to five pollutants – TSS, O&G, pH, BOD and fecal coliform.¹⁸ The factors that must be considered to determine BCT include:

[C]onsideration of the reasonableness of the relationship between the costs of attaining a reduction in effluents and the effluent reduction benefits derived, and the comparison of the cost and level of reduction of such pollutants from the discharge from publicly owned treatment works to the cost and level of reduction of such pollutants from a class or category of industrial sources, and shall take into account the age of equipment and facilities involved, the process employed, the engineering aspects of the application of various types of control techniques, process changes, non-water quality environmental impact (including energy requirements), and such other factors as the Administrator deems appropriate.¹⁹

In the absence of any BCT determination by the State Board or EPA, it devolves to each discharger to apply the BCT criteria looking to the entire category of California industrial stormwater dischargers. In doing so, each facility must determine that its BCT implementation “will directly - not just incidentally - reduce [the relevant pollutant] and do so better than any other pollutant control technology.”²⁰

In order to issue the General Permit, the Board must find that: “(1) The discharges are produced by the same or similar operations[;] (2) The discharges involve the same or similar types of waste[;]”

(3) The discharges require the same or similar treatment standards[and;] (4) The discharges are more appropriately regulated under general discharge requirements than individual discharge requirements.”²¹

The Draft Permit entirely overlooks the findings and determinations required by Water Code § 13263 and 40 C.F.R. § 122.28(a)(2)(i). No such findings or determinations are found anywhere in the draft permit or accompanying Fact Sheet. Given that the findings must be made in order to utilize the general permit, it is nevertheless clear that the Board must agree that all industrial dischargers around the State produce stormwater discharges “by the same or similar operations,” “involve the same or similar types of waste,” and “require the same or similar treatment standards.” The Board must make these required findings and provide required analysis to support such findings. For example, the Board should make a finding that clarifies that industrial dischargers covered under the Draft permit produce stormwater discharges by “the same of similar operations.” Further, because the Board has opted to issue a statewide general permit for all industrial storm water dischargers, it has to have identified all industrial storm water discharges as a single, industrial category. Hence, each discharger must look to the best performers throughout all the facilities enrolled in the General Permit.

The 2013 Draft Permit does include several findings that refer to BAT and BCT. For example, proposed Finding 1 states that “The NPDES permit must require implementation of Best Available Technology Economically Achievable (BAT) and Best Conventional Pollutant Control Technology (BCT) to reduce or eliminate pollutants in storm water discharges and authorized non-storm water discharges (NSWDs).” Also, Section IV.B.3 illegally requires implementation of BMPs that reflect “best industry practices” without BAT and BCT references. Additionally, proposed Finding 32 states that “This General Permit requires control of pollutant discharges using BAT and BCT to prevent and reduce discharges of pollutants, and any more stringent effluent limitations necessary to meet applicable WQS.” However, these findings simply bolster the dischargers’ arguments that the watered-down language of proposed Section V.A reflects the Board’s determination of BAT and BCT for industrial stormwater dischargers. Again, no such BAT or BCT determination has been made. Hence, the Board should ensure that effluent limitation in Section V.A meets the Board’s statutory mandate that it be consistent with BAT and BCT and not be interpreted or misunderstood as replacing those requirements with a newly defined “best industry practices” standard.

Likewise, the proposed Glossary generally describes the BAT and BCT standards. As staff indicated to the State Board during the August 21, 2013 workshop, it was not their intent to either make a BAT or BCT determination or lessen those mandated requirements in the Draft Permit. However, by omitting the key terms from the effluent limitation, while including it in several findings and the glossary, it is clear that dischargers intend to argue that the proposed Section V.A language is the Board’s determination of what BAT and BCT is for industrial stormwater discharges. As noted above, no such determination applying Congress’ mandatory criteria has been conducted. The Board should make this clear by adding the Coalition’s suggested language edits to Section V.A set forth below.

We believe the following language would preserve staff’s effort to better explain what BAT and BCT mean while making it clear that those are the technology standards that must be achieved by each discharger. In the interest of arriving at a final Permit that addresses our groups’ concerns, we provide several options for edits to each of the problematic provisions referenced above:

²¹ Water Code § 13263. See also 40 C.F.R. § 122.28(a)(2)(i) (the federal regulations applicable to the State Board also add a criterion that the discharges “[r]equire the same or similar monitoring”).

Option 1: Dischargers shall implement BMPs that achieve BAT and BCT and that reduce or prevent discharges of pollutants in their storm water discharge in a manner that reflects best industry practice considering technological availability and economic achievability.

Option 2: Dischargers shall implement BMPs that reduce or prevent discharges of pollutants in their storm water discharge in a manner that reflects best industry practice considering technological availability and economic achievability and that otherwise achieve BAT and BCT.

Option 3: Dischargers shall implement BMPs that reduce or prevent discharges of pollutants in their storm water discharge in a manner that reflects best industry practice considering technological availability and economic achievability. The BMPs implemented by each discharger must achieve BAT and BCT.

Page 29, Section X.H.1, footnote 11

Option 1: For the purposes of this General Permit, the requirement to implement BMPs “to the extent feasible” requires Dischargers to select, design, install and implement BMPs that achieve BAT and BCT and that reduce or prevent discharges of pollutants in their storm water discharge in a manner that reflects best industry practice considering technological availability and economic achievability.

Option 2: For the purposes of this General Permit, the requirement to implement BMPs “to the extent feasible” requires Dischargers to select, design, install and implement BMPs that reduce or prevent discharges of pollutants in their storm water discharge in a manner that reflects best industry practice considering technological availability and economic achievability and that otherwise achieve BAT and BCT.

Option 3: For the purposes of this General Permit, the requirement to implement BMPs “to the extent feasible” requires Dischargers to select, design, install and implement BMPs that reduce or prevent discharges of pollutants in their storm water discharge in a manner that reflects best industry practice considering technological availability and economic achievability. The BMPs implemented by each discharger must achieve BAT and BCT.

In order to evaluate the thoroughness and legitimacy of a facility’s BMP selection and whether or not their facility complies with BAT and BCT, the permit’s SWPPP requirement and the Exceedance Response Action (ERA) technical Reports should include, in addition to showing how Numeric Action Levels (NAL) will be achieved, an explanation of how the facility evaluated and is implementing BAT and BCT for their operations. Thus, Section X.H.4.b should include a specific reference to BAT and BCT as follows:

The Discharger shall ensure that the SWPPP identifies and justifies each minimum BMP or applicable advanced BMP not being implemented at the facility because they do not reflect best industry practice considering technological availability and economic achievability and are not necessary to implement BAT and BCT at the facility.

And the Level 1 and 2 ERA Technical Reports should have to include in their reports/responses an explanation of how dischargers believe their BMPs meet the BAT and BCT requirements.²² Currently, even at a Level 2 ERA Technical Report, the focus of the permit is entirely on meeting NALs rather than the core requirement – BAT/BCT (which the NALs disavow they have anything to do with, see Finding M.63 [“NALs are not intended to serve as technology-based ... numeric effluent limitations [and]... are not derived directly from ... BAT/BCT requirements”). The specific linkage to BAT and BCT should be reflected in this important component of the permit by requiring facilities to explain how they made and are implementing their BAT and BCT determinations. Given the permit’s additional focus on technical competence for Qualified Industrial Stormwater Practitioners (QISP) and report preparers, each facility should be able to engage in an informed discussion of what they believe BAT or BCT to be for a given facility.

To conclude, by eliminating long-standing, clear references to the BAT and BCT requirement found in the permit’s effluent limitation section, the new draft will confuse and entice dischargers to interpret away the BAT/BCT requirement in exchange for a new – and what will be argued a different – standard, the newly proposed “best industry practice” language. Our groups believe that the above language suggestions would retain staff’s effort at attempting to clarify in plainer language the general understanding of the technical terms BAT and BCT while ensuring that those fundamental requirements not inadvertently be interpreted out of the permit or be read to invite dischargers to apply BMPs that are less than BAT and BCT for their facility and thus fail to comply with Clean Water Act requirements. Likewise, requiring dischargers to disclose their analysis of what they believe BAT and BCT is for their facility would be a much more direct way of tracking whether or not a facility truly has implemented the best technologies available to them.

II. Volume-based Design Storm Standard is Unclear and Insufficient to Maintain Compliance.

Section X.H.6 of the Draft Permit establishes design storm standards for treatment control BMPs. These specifications generally mirror those used for new and re-development standards, as they appear in various Municipal Separate Storm Sewer System (MS4) permits around California.^{23,24,25} These standards have been advanced in other contexts, yet are more lax than the 95th percentile standards established by EPA for federal projects.²⁶ The Draft Permit fails to consider the suitability of using weakened municipal standards for the purposes of industrial permitting, where pollutant concentrations vary widely from one facility to another. We request that the 85th percentile volume-based standard be re-evaluated and replaced with design standards more appropriate for industrial facilities and reflective of current technical standards.

Design storm standards specified in Section X.H.6 of the Draft Permit include those for volume- and flow-based BMPs. The proposed flow-based standards seem appropriate, because they take into account a margin of error and would ensure adequate drawdown and release rates, assuming the flow-based BMP incorporates adequate treatment. The 85th percentile design storm for volume-based BMPs, however, fails to consider continuous conditions (i.e. drawdown times, inter-event periods, release rates and flow hydrographs) affecting the design and adequacy of storage structures and control devices. Without such considerations the Board is unable to anticipate exceedance frequencies of storage volume or pollutant load. This standard is insufficient to satisfy BAT/BCT and fails to ensure pollutant discharges will not cause or contribute to an exceedance of a water quality standard (WQS).

Board staff should review the volume-based specifications and provide clarity regarding the consequences of selecting the 85th percentile annual 24-hour storm as the standard. Does this mean that permittees are exempt from compliance during storms exceeding this value? Since the standard fails to consider specifications for a release rate for the design volume, a potential reading of the Draft Permit would be that so long as the first storm of the year is captured, equal to or equivalent to the 85th percentile annual 24-hour storm, all subsequent runoff throughout the wet season would be permitted for unregulated release. This must be clarified. If it means all subsequent runoff would be permitted, it cannot be said to satisfy BAT/BCT requirements, and on its face fails to ensure pollutant discharges will not cause or contribute to an exceedance of WQS.

Inconsistencies in Section X.H.6 introduce uncertainty to permittees regarding permit requirements and the required design storm. The permit states “A Factor of Safety shall be incorporated into the design of all treatment control BMPs to ensure that storm water is sufficiently treated throughout the life of the treatment control BMPs.”²⁷ The Draft Permit then specifies numeric design standards, without defining “factor of safety” or elaborating on what it means that sufficient treatment shall be achieved. Are facilities in fact required to capture, harvest and store runoff above this standard? If so, what is a reasonable limit? Should Permittees plan for the 5-year 24-hour storm or the 100-year 24-hour storm?

In practice, facilities are most likely to utilize the 85th percentile volumetric standard without consideration of necessary parameters, such as safety factor, drawdown times and release rates. They may install retention ponds, infiltration basins, baker tanks, cisterns or dry wells designed for the 85th percentile storm, but what happens when these fill-up after the first significant storm event of the year? If this captured water cannot be safely infiltrated at a rapid rate or used on-site for other purposes, runoff from all subsequent storms will likely be discharged directly. This is the reason several recent settlements resolving citizen suits against industrial facilities have required implementation of higher design storms, explicitly providing that the facility shall only be responsible for runoff associated with storms below a specified return interval (e.g. the 10-year 24-hour storm or 25-year 24-hour storm). The fact that a number of industrial facilities throughout California have successfully implemented measures utilizing higher, more protective standards than the proposed 85th percentile standard proposed shows that a higher design storm standard is feasible. For example, a current Draft EIR for the WestPac Pittsburg Energy Infrastructure Project states the facility is currently equipped to retain a storm in excess of the 100-year 24-hour storm and new stormwater facilities on the site are designed for the 10-year 24-hour storm.²⁸

Under the proposed language, the State Board specifies a capture volume without consideration of continuous conditions (e.g. inter-event period, drawdown, infiltration). Rather than specifying a given design storm for the purposes of sizing volumetric control structures, the State Board may wish to specify a bypass rate or permitted overflow that achieves BAT and BCT. Continuous simulation modeling using site-specific data can be conducted with simple, freely available models to determine under which scenarios their system would discharge. This would enable optimization for cost and sizing and grant the State Board greater assurance of beneficial-use attainment. If, for example, facilities were responsible only for storms below the 10-year 24-hour return period, control structures could be appropriately designed for cost and physical constraints. Conversely, if the Board intends to exempt all discharges in excess of the 85th percentile storm event the permit should clearly reflect this intent, along with the rationale.

To reduce uncertainty regarding what constitutes compliance, we recommend a minimum standard for volume-based controls that ensures capture of all storms up to the 95th percentile event. Calculations must be informed by local rainfall history and information regarding the capture-and-release control utilized. Since runoff occurs much faster than typical drawdown periods, additional storage will be required to capture multiple storms, or treatment and/or infiltration must be employed to release captured runoff within the required timeframe. For the purposes of establishing a BAT and BCT standard for volume-based control structures, it may be appropriate to provide that permittees would not be held liable for runoff associated with storm events in excess of the 10-year 24-hour storm.

III. The Board Must Ensure that Industrial Stormwater Discharges and Authorized NSWDS Do Not Cause or Contribute to an Exceedance of Water Quality Standards for Receiving Waters.

The Draft Permit causes confusion for industrial stormwater dischargers regarding their obligation not to cause or contribute to exceedances of water quality standards. Paragraph 37 of the Draft Permit states:

This General Permit requires all Dischargers to comply with all applicable WQS for waters of the United States that may be affected by their industrial storm water discharges and authorized NSWDS. WQS apply to the quality of the receiving water, not the quality of the industrial storm water discharge. Therefore, compliance with the receiving water limitations can generally not be determined solely by the effluent water quality characteristics.

First, the Draft Permit's language purporting to move the point of compliance for all stormwater dischargers and adding the language "in any affected receiving water" to Effluent Limit VI.A constitutes backsliding from the 1999 Permit, which required that "dischargers shall not cause or contribute to a violation of an applicable water quality standard" measured at the location where stormwater leaves the facilities. By attempting to move the facilities monitoring location or point of compliance for the receiving water limits into unspecified downstream waters, the Draft Permit effectively adds a mixing zone without have adhered to the requisite regulatory process.²⁹ That alteration to the water quality-based receiving water limit is less stringent than the existing permit as written and as clarified by the courts. Clean Water Act and federal regulations prohibit backsliding, or weakening of permit terms, from the previous permit. Section 402(o)(1) of the Clean Water Act requires that, for effluent limitations based on a state standard, "a permit may not be renewed, reissued, or modified to contain effluent limitations which are less stringent than the comparable effluent limitations in the previous permit," except in circumstances not present here.³⁰ Similarly, federal regulations require that "when a permit is renewed or reissued, interim effluent limitations, standards or conditions must be at least as stringent as the final effluent limitations, standards, or conditions in the previous permit. . . ."³¹ In order to avoid violating the rules for establishing mixing zones and EPA's approval process, and to avoid improper backsliding, the State Board should maintain the receiving water limitation in the current permit.

Second, long-standing case law states that where a discharger does not possess a permit with an express mixing zone provision, that discharger's compliance with receiving water objectives must be determined at the point of discharge from the facility.³² A permitted discharger may only receive a mixing zone of dilution to determine compliance with receiving water objectives, if and only if that discharger has conducted a mixing zone study, submitted to the Regional Board for approval, and written into the individual discharger's permit.³³ Where dischargers have not conducted a mixing zone study to determine their relative contribution to receiving water quality degradation, the CWA does not provide a free pass, and evaluation of compliance with water quality standards can only be made through analysis of the discharged effluent.

²⁹ EPA Water Quality Standards Handbook, Subchapter 5.1. See also Policy for Implementation of Toxics Standards for Inland Surface Waters, Enclosed Bays, and Estuaries of California, Section 1.4.2.

Third, and equally importantly, the only relevant information the Draft Permit requires industrial stormwater dischargers to collect is end-of-pipe effluent data, not receiving water quality data. It is well-established that every NPDES permit must include discharge monitoring sufficient to determine compliance with all permit limits—in this case, the Draft Permit's requirement to comply with all applicable receiving water quality standards. As recently explained by the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals:

[T]he Clean Water Act requires every NPDES permittee to monitor its discharges into the navigable waters of the United States in a manner sufficient to determine whether it is in compliance with the relevant NPDES permit. 33 U.S.C. § 1342(a)(2); 40 C.F.R. § 122.44(i)(1) (“[E]ach NPDES permit shall include conditions meeting the following . . . monitoring requirements . . . to assure compliance with permit limitations.”). That is, an NPDES permit is unlawful if a permittee is not required to effectively monitor its permit compliance.³⁴

The Draft Permit fails this test by (1) prohibiting discharges that fail to comply with receiving water standards, (2) wrongly asserting that such compliance cannot be determined solely by analyzing the quality of effluent discharging from a facility, yet (3) only requiring water quality monitoring of effluent discharging from each facility.

We suggest the Board strike the last two sentences of the current proposed finding 37: This General Permit requires all Dischargers to comply with all applicable WQS for waters of the United States that may be affected by their industrial storm water discharges and authorized NSWDS. ~~WQS apply to the quality of the receiving water, not the quality of the industrial storm water discharge. Therefore, compliance with the receiving water limitations can generally not be determined solely by the effluent water quality characteristics.~~

We further propose that Receiving Water Limitation VI.A be amended to read like the existing permit limit: “Dischargers shall ensure that industrial storm water discharges and authorized NSWDS do not cause or contribute to an exceedance of any applicable WQS ~~in any affected receiving water.~~”

IV. The Board Cannot Delay TMDL Implementation, as Proposed in the Draft Permit.

Numeric waste load allocations (“WLAs”) that apply to dischargers covered by the Draft Permit must be directly incorporated into the permit as water quality-based effluent limitations (“WQBELs”).

³³ See, e.g., Waterkeepers N. Cal. v. AG Indus. Mfg., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 43006,³³ Water Quality Standards; Establishment of Numeric Criteria for Priority Toxic Pollutants for the State of California, 65 Fed. Reg. 31682 (May 18, 2000), 31701 (“All waters (including lakes, estuaries, and marine waters) . . . are subject to the criteria promulgated today. Such criteria will need to be attained at the end of the discharge pipe, unless the State authorizes a mixing zone.”).

³⁴ NRDC v. County of L.A., 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 16416, 36 (9th Cir. 2013).

WLAs are “a type of WQBEL.”³⁵ When developing WQBELs for NPDES permits, the permitting authority is required to ensure that “effluent limits are consistent with the assumptions and requirements of any available wasteload allocation for the discharge.”³⁶ It is EPA’s longstanding position that NPDES permits must contain effluent limits and conditions that are consistent with the requirements of WLAs in established TMDLs.³⁷ The State Water Board is obligated to immediately incorporate existing, applicable WLAs as WQBELs into any adopted permit.

Contrary to these requirements, the Draft Permit inappropriately defers incorporation of any WLAs as WQBELs. In fact, the Draft Permit seemingly puts on hold discharger compliance with all TMDLs to an unspecified date in the future.³⁸ Specifically, the Draft Permit states that the regional boards must have their recommendations on “TMDL-specific permit requirements” to the State Board by July 1, 2015.³⁹ However, it is uncertain if and when a permit re-opener to include the WLAs will actually occur. Further, the Draft Permit appears to allow for TMDLs with numeric WLAs that have already been approved by regional boards and USEPA to now be modified to a “a BMP-based approach when incorporated into the Permit,”⁴⁰ without proper stakeholder process. Does the State Board anticipate the regional boards re-opening all TMDL Basin Plan Amendments? The public will not be able to adequately address any concerns over the proposals for the 33 TMDLs listed in Attachment E during a generic 30-day comment period. Approved TMDLs have individually gone through lengthy stakeholder processes prior to adoption. Thus the Draft Permit, as proposed, may not be legally adopted.⁴¹

As a practical matter, the Board has articulated no legitimate basis for not incorporating the existing WLAs now. A review of TMDLs developed in California reveals that there are many numeric WLAs specifically developed and applicable to industrial dischargers covered by the Draft Permit. Some of these TMDLs include the Ballona Creek and Estuary Metals TMDL, the Los Angeles River Metals TMDL, the LA River Trash TMDL, the Calleguas Creek Watershed Metals and Selenium TMDL, and the Santa Monica Bay DDT and PCB TMDL, among others. These WLAs must immediately be incorporated as WQBELs into the Draft Permit to ensure that the permit complies with legal mandates.⁴²

A delay in WLA incorporation is especially unjustified for TMDLs with expired compliance deadlines, such as the Santa Clara River Reach 3 Chloride TMDL, the Los Angeles Area Lakes Nitrogen, Phosphorus, Mercury, Trash, Organochlorine Pesticides and PCBs TMDLs, and the San Gabriel River Metals and Selenium TMDL, among others.

Rather than deferring incorporation of WLAs to an unknown later day and allowing for a BMP-based approach for compliance when numeric WLAs are in-effect, the Board must revise the Draft Permit to incorporate all existing, applicable numeric WLAs as WQBELs prior to adoption.

V. The Board Should Strengthen Monitoring Requirements to Determine Compliance and Support the Development of NELs.

Since the Storm Water Panel on Numeric Limits was convened in 2006, California's Storm Water Multiple Application and Report Tracking System (SMARTS) database has matured into a robust dataset and a number of stormwater control manufacturers have released numeric performance data to the public. Information available from the database may be used to inform determinations of feasibility, regarding inclusion of numeric effluent limits in California's industrial permit, as well as evaluations of BAT/BCT technology(ies). However, the Board finds that "current electronically-available storm water data set ... has very limited value due to the limited pool of industrial facilities submitting electronic data, poor overall data quality and extreme variance within the dataset,"⁴³ and has therefore referred to the Draft Permit as a "bridge permit" meant to collect quality storm water discharge data.

The discharger community also asserts that the data collected under the current stormwater permit is insufficient to be used to determine compliance with the permit. If the dischargers are correct, the Draft Permit likewise fails to comply with this legal requirement because, as designed, the program will not result in the collection of data sufficient to determine permittees' compliance with the Permit's key requirements, including its Discharge Prohibitions, Effluent Limitations and Receiving Water Limitations. As *Natural Res. Def. Council, Inc. v. Cnty. of Los Angeles*⁴⁴ recently reaffirmed, NPDES permit must include a self-monitoring program adequate to determine compliance with permit conditions.⁴⁵ To meet the requirements of the Clean Water Act, and to achieve the Board's goal of providing more robust data, the program must be revised and strengthened as detailed below.

A. The Draft Permit Should Require Sample Collection at Each Facility Outfall.

The proposed Sampling Location Reduction in the Draft Permit will prevent permittees, the Board and the public from meaningfully evaluating compliance with Permit requirements. The Representative Sampling Reduction ("RSR") provision essentially allows dischargers to cherry-pick the best discharge locations with the least risk of a NAL exceedance to sample for each drainage area under the condition that "the industrial activities and physical characteristics of the drainage areas(s) are substantially similar."⁴⁶ As indicated in our October 2012 comments, this is considerably weaker than the 1997 Permit's requirement of "substantially identical" BMPs and sampling locations.

The Board's Response to Comments states that the previous phrasing was "worthless or subject to misinterpretation" and that sampling and analysis would be "costly and in many cases unnecessary." Our groups strongly disagree. The new language doesn't account for dischargers' impact on receiving waters and the fact that some facilities may discharge to more than one waterbody, each with different water quality limits and impairments. The Draft Permit also fails to impose a limit on the number of locations that can be reduced so long as they are in the same drainage area. As a result, the RSR significantly weakens the Draft Permit's monitoring program. This reduction of required sampling locations violates both the intent of the Clean Water Act to eliminate all pollutant discharges⁴⁷ and the requirement for monitoring programs to collect sufficient data of "representative of the monitored activity."⁴⁸ The Draft Permit must therefore require sampling at each discharge outfall.

⁴⁸ 40 CFR § 122.48(b).

B. The Draft Permit Should Not Allow For a Reduction to the Number of Annual Qualifying Sampling Events.

The Draft Permit allows for a reduction to the number of “qualifying storm events” (“QSEs”) for dischargers who can demonstrate that results from four consecutive QSE’s do not exceed NALs and “full compliance” with the permit requirements. With frequent inconsistencies in discharges and anomalies in sampling, the Board’s proposed sampling reduction scheme could permit a discharger to continue negatively impacting water quality while slipping under the radar of the Permit’s monitoring scheme. Also, decreased monitoring frequencies will decrease the likelihood of finding NAL exceedances and triggering actions. Further, the NAL values are very weak and do not serve as an adequate surrogate for determining if the discharge is causing or contributing to a water quality standards exceedance. Also there are not NALs, in particular “instantaneous maximum” NALs, in the Draft Permit for all constituents that may be monitored so this is an inappropriate trigger for monitoring reduction. Four sampling events per year is already a low frequency considering the potential risks of industrial discharge. Consistent monitoring should remain throughout the permit cycle in order to track trends and to adequately understand the discharge. Thus, we urge the State Board to remove this provision.

In addition, it is inappropriate to allow a discharger to reduce their monitoring effort simply because they are a member of a Compliance Group. All facilities have unique characteristics and manage their stormwater differently. Requiring only one (if they meet the SFR requirements) or two sampling events per year will not provide the Board and the public the information necessary to meaningfully evaluate compliance with Permit requirements.

C. The Draft Permit Should Not Allow the Combination of Samples.

The Draft Permit further weakens the effectiveness of the monitoring program by allowing dischargers to have the lab combine samples from up to four (or more than four with regional board approval) different drainage areas for analysis “if the industrial activities and physical characteristics (grade, surface materials, etc.) within each of the drainage areas are substantially similar to one another.”⁴⁹ Like the Sample Location Reduction provision of the Draft Permit, no consideration is given to the different control measures that may exist in different drainage areas of the facility. Moreover, as proposed, the Qualified Combined Samples provision will apply to samples from a facility with outfalls discharging to different waterbodies with potentially different water quality limits and impairments. The Qualified Combined Samples provision encourages dischargers to combine samples in order to dilute discharges and reduce lab analysis costs. In addition, because it fails to focus individually on each outfall and its BMPs, the Qualified Combined Samples provision will add unnecessary complication to the required, careful evaluation of the effectiveness of the facility’s BMPs and the need for additional pollution control measures. Such combinations would only serve to mask the potential pollutants contained in storm water discharges and would lead to gross underestimates of facility impacts to receiving waters. For these reasons, the Qualified Samples Provision must be removed from the permit.

D. The Board Should Put in Place a Framework to Develop Numeric Technology-Based Effluent Limitations.

The permit was last updated nearly seventeen years ago in 1997. Since then, our understanding and techniques to manage stormwater have progressed significantly, as have our industrial data sets. We are disappointed that this Draft Permit fails to include enforceable limits for toxic chemicals associated with stormwater runoff from the thousands of industrial facilities across California. This is despite demonstration that such limits are feasible and currently being attained by the majority of industrial sites.

This permit will not go into effect until July 2015, almost two years from now. During this time, we urge the Board to put in place a framework for assessing the adequacy of data collection and monitoring parallel to permit implementation, including a process for making revisions to monitoring and reporting requirements, as needed. The Draft Permit states that the "State Water Board expects that this information and assessment process will provide information necessary to determine the feasibility of numeric effluent limits for industrial dischargers in the next reissuance of the IGP, consistent with the Blue Ribbon Panel recommendation." We urge the Board to develop and adopt a process and timeline or "workplan" for doing so with established checkpoints to assess progress towards this important goal. The workplan could address the data gaps identified in the 2006 Blue Ribbon Panel Report⁵⁰, which highlights the need for a rigorous sampling scheme that allows facilities and regulators to assess numeric effluent limitations equivalent to the pollutant reduction achievable through the implementation of BAT/BCT technology(ies). A workplan would help the Board ensure that this permit yields the data necessary to develop numeric technology-based effluent limitations grounded in the BAT/BCT standards for controlling pollutants discharged from industrial sites in California. A workplan should ensure that there are adequate performance data on technology(ies) chosen for analysis under the BAT/BCT factors required by 40 C.F.R. § 122.44(a) and (b), § 123.5 such that, once the chosen technology(ies) have been identified as BAT/BCT, the effluent limitations based on BAT/BCT can be expressed numerically.

VI. The Board Should Address Other Outstanding Issues with the Draft Permit.

In addition to the major issues discussed above, we believe the following changes need to be made to ensure the Industrial Permit meets the requirements of the Clean Water Act.

The Board must ensure that the Draft Permit is consistent with the law regarding pre-production plastics. The Draft Permit indicates that a plastics facility is "exempt" if they meet one of the two listed requirements (XVIII Special Requirements-Plastic Materials, Section A, subsection 2). The second of the listed requirements offers a suite of BMPs to be used in lieu of the screen capture system. We are concerned that these BMPs may allow pre-production pellets to enter the stormdrain system. What analysis did the State Board conduct to determine that these BMPs will lead to equivalent protections? In addition, this appears to be inconsistent with the law. In fact, the law specifies that the regional boards may go beyond the 1 mm screen and implement additional BMPs. This evidences legislative intent to have additional and more robust protections.

In addition, the Permit describes the situations in which an alternative to the 1mm mesh screens would be appropriate, subject to Board approval, and these differ very slightly, but significantly from Assembly Bill 258. The Permit allows for submission of alternatives if the containment system is "infeasible" or poses the threat of "illicit discharge" (XVIII Special Requirements-Plastic Materials, Section A, subsection 1, subpart b). In contrast, AB 258 allows for proposal of an alternative when the installation is "...not appropriate because one or more of a facility's down gradient drainage areas is not discharged through a stormwater conveyance system, or when the regional board determines that... [a] screen is not appropriate..."⁵¹ Thus the Permit is overly-broad, giving the facility more leeway in proposing alternatives if they argue that the system is "infeasible" or poses an illicit discharge threat. This is inconsistent with the law and should be addressed.

Available at <http://www.swrcb.ca.gov>.

⁵¹ Chapter 5.2, 13367, e, 1.

Commingled non-industrial stormwater should not be excused. Section XII.D.2.b encourages commingling and run-on from non-industrial stormwater, thus diluting monitoring results effectiveness for evaluating on-site BMPs and protecting water quality. This Section should be revised to require continued monitoring of claimed non-industrial source or run-on.

Disturbed background levels are not natural and should not be excused. Section XII.D.2.c states that the Natural Background Pollutant Source Demonstration shall include “A statement that the Discharger has determined that the exceedance of the NAL is attributable solely to the presence of the pollutant in the natural background.” The Permit needs to specify that this does not include natural levels that have been disturbed by the industrial activity i.e. the facility.

Excluding all off-site auxiliary functions will not protect water quality. The Industrial Permit Fact Sheet, pg. 9, finds that “when auxiliary functions are performed at physically separate facilities from the establishment they serve, they generally are not subject to General Permit coverage.” The Industrial Permit should cover off-site auxiliary functions when those functions are a primary component of the facility’s operation. For example, off-site bulk storage may be auxiliary to a concrete batch facility, but that bulk storage would be one of the most polluting aspects of the facility’s operation. To protect water quality from all sources of industrial activities, the Permit should cover any off-site auxiliary function that is a primary component to a facility’s operation.

The SWPPP map should show monitoring locations. Section X.E.3. requires the Discharger to include various information on their SWPPP map, including: the facility’s boundary area, drainage areas, flow direction, location of stormwater collection and conveyance systems, identification of all impervious areas of the facility, locations of areas directly exposed to precipitation, and areas of industrial activity. However, there is no requirement for the Discharger to show where a facility’s monitoring locations exist. Given the Permit’s numerous monitoring exemptions, it is critical that the Discharger provide, at the very least, its monitoring locations.

The qualification for “no exposure” should not include storage of final industrial products or heavy vehicle machinery. Section XVII.D allows dischargers to qualify for “No Exposure Certification” (NEC) coverage without a Storm-Resistant Shelter for “2. Adequately maintained vehicles used in material handling,” and “3. Final products, other than products that would be mobilized in stormwater discharge (e.g., rock salt)...” Both final industrial products and heavy vehicle machinery should not be given coverage under the NEC, and should not be exempt from the Industrial Permit.

The Industrial Permit should not incorporate LID language from the Region 8 Scrap Metal Permit. During the August 21st State Water Board Public Hearing, a suggestion was made that the Industrial Permit should incorporate LID language from Region 8’s Scrap Metal Permit. Region 8’s Permit, ORDER NO. R8-2012-0012, NPDES No. CAG 618001, requires Permittees:

To the extent practicable, minimize the runoff from the site through low impact development (LID) type of BMPs, such as: onsite infiltration including percolation and retention basins, pervious pavement, evapotranspiration and onsite storage (e.g., rain barrels or cisterns to store storm water) and use, green roofs, etc.; control flow volume and velocity through vegetated swales, bioretention facilities, etc. Develop and implement a program, to the maximum extent practicable, to percolate, evapotranspire, or use onsite, the design volume of runoff from non-industrial areas and uncontaminated runoff from industrial areas.

While our groups generally encourage the use of LID, and in particular stormwater permits that encourage permittees to utilize LID practices to manage stormwater, the suggested language from the Metal Yard Permit is vague, unenforceable, and we fear does not meet the appropriate Clean Water Act standards.

We support the use of LID in the Industrial Permit, but we believe a numeric standard is necessary to meet the requirements of the Clean Water Act. We support the inclusion of LID language with a numeric standard that conforms to other permits requiring, at minimum, 95th percentile storm retention where feasible (infeasibility could be the result of pollutant specific concerns for recharge).

We look forward to working with you and your staff to ensure the Final Permit will serve to protect California's water resources.

c/o Jeanine Townsend, Clerk to the Board

Dear State Water Board Members:

I strongly support the State Water Board's work to update the 15-year old Industrial General Stormwater Permit. Runoff from industrial facilities can contain heavy metals such as lead, zinc and copper. These pollutants are highly toxic and endanger California communities and watersheds. Unfortunately, after more than two years of work, the current Draft Permit fails to make necessary improvements, and in several respects, weakens industrial pollution controls.

This permit grants the worst polluters unfair economic advantage, and will make few improvements to reduce pollution to California's bays, rivers, and ocean. In particular, I object to new permit language that delays or fails to encourage industrial stormwater polluters to implement the best stormwater pollution treatment technologies. This creates confusion among the industrial community and regulators alike. California needs to make sure that industrial polluters implement the most up-to-date stormwater pollution controls and treatment technologies if we are going to clean-up the hundreds of degraded rivers, lakes, and shorelines around the State, and facilitate efficient permit enforcement.

The draft fails to include enforceable limits for toxic chemicals associated with stormwater runoff from the thousands of industrial facilities across California. I urge the State Water Board to work with staff to develop a streamlined permit that is clear and enforceable, and achieves the shared goal of collecting more and better data.

Please develop a strong, enforceable Industrial Stormwater Permit that helps ensure that California waterways are safe for swimming, drinking, and fishing.

Thank you.
