I have been fishing the Big Sur River for 43 years catching native steelhead. I am worried that the increase in water intake will decrease the fish running through the river. I am afraid if they keep pumping out more and more water the river will dry up like the Carmel River does every summer. I want to be able to fish these local rivers now and in the future with my son and grandchildren. I believe the decrease in water in the river will sooner or later affect the fishing and not allow future fishing to happen.
